To whom it may concern

With regard to the Microsoft Antitrust case, I am expressing my total support for the prosecution of MS and their questionable business practices. Microsoft have slowly taken on a progressively more aggressive stance to controlling 100% of the market and it needs to stop now. Inferior software products that take away all of a user's freedom of choice and independence are a sick joke. Apart from the fact MS products are behind the ball, full of security holes and are basically a piece of advertising software that (tries to) override any piece of third party software that would compete with an MS product. Open source needs to be made more public, so money-grubbers like Bill Gates won't get their way, and everyone gets a fair crack at the market, and the PC industry, especially since most 'family' computer users just want a PC that works, not takes advantage of their lack of knowledge.

Burn, Microsoft, Burn.
